In the powertrain wheel bearings play a significant role as they are the initial connection between the moving and static parts of the vehicle.
The bearing in its simplest form is a friction reducing device to allow an easy rotation.

For the proper replacement of a wheel bearing, it has to be pulled out of the hub assembly, preferably using a hydraulic press.
When accurate alignment is not ensured during the re-installation of the new bearing, problems can arise and the bearing wearing out rapidly and causing further damages.
